Conference theme - Beyond Sui Generis? Understanding the EU as a Comparative Polity and an Interdisciplinary Subject

David Lawrence Hall, University of Pittsburgh
3942 Forbes Ave. (between S Bouquet & Schenley Dr.)
Pittsburgh, PA 15260

EUSA CHAIR WELCOME

Welcome to EUSA 2023!

As incoming Chair of EUSA, I am delighted to welcome you to the “mothership” - the University of Pittsburgh has been home to EUSA since 1991, and its University Center for International Studies has long supported EUSA with generous financial contributions. EUSA is the largest association in the world devoted solely to EU studies with over 600 members. This year’s conference includes almost 300 participants and 75 panels. It has been almost 25 years since the conference last convened in Pittsburgh, so it was time for some of us to come back, and for others to discover it for the first time!

The year since we met in Miami has been a consequential one for the EU. With a violent war still raging on European soil at a terrible human cost, the EU has transformed some of the ways in which it engages with the world. The Russian war of aggression in Ukraine has pushed for further integration of some of the EU’s foreign and security policy, as well as energy transition. Candidacy status has been granted to Ukraine, Moldova, and Bosnia and Herzegovina. While the rule-of-law has continued to be challenged from within, the EU has taken first steps towards confronting some of its Member States. The increasingly geopolitical posture of China has accelerated calls for European strategic autonomy, even if the Member States do not agree yet on what this means, especially vis-à-vis the United States. To compete in a world where supply chains are being overhauled and economic tools used for geopolitical purposes, the EU has created since 2022 a plethora of new “geo-economic” instruments and taken an assertive turn towards industrial policy. The EU has moved further towards policies to address climate change, notably by putting a price on carbon. A huge question mark remains as to how any of these policies will be financed.

With the EU moving simultaneously towards an “ever closer union” and a multispeed, a la carte collection of states and policies, there is plenty for us to study. As the conference program emphasizes, EU studies are vibrant and well, especially with the addition of a new generation of scholars doing cutting-edge research. Collectively, our research also informs crucial policy problems, from war and peace to climate change.

Congratulations to Seth Jolly and Kaija Schilde who have put together an excellent program centered around the theme of Beyond Sui Generis? Understanding the EU as a Comparative Polity and an Interdisciplinary Subject and who have worked tirelessly, along with Joe Figliulo, to reorganize panels up to the last second. To highlight a few of our program’s offerings, we have several plenary sessions that should be of interest to the entire EUSA community, including the 2023 Journal of European Integration Annual Lecture by Joachim Koops on “The European Union’s Role in Security and Global Affairs: Rediscovering its Integrative Power”; the Journal of Common Market Studies Lecture by Olga Onuch on “Fighting for Europe: Ukrainians’ and Belarusians’ Vision of the EU and Their Place in it”; plenary roundtables on “The colonial origins of the EU”, “Russia’s war against Ukraine”, and “Understanding bicameral systems: the EU and the USA compared”; and a celebration of the lifetime achievements of Brigid Laffan. After their successful introduction at the 2022 conference in Miami, café sessions are back again with informal discussions of research, publishing, teaching, and diversity taking place over breakfast Saturday morning.

Very much like the EU itself, the presidency of EUSA lately has been run like a “trio”, with the past, present, and future chairs collaborating on decision-making. My heartfelt thanks to Sara Wallace Goodman, who has judiciously guided the association through the pandemic and difficult times, as well as to Dan Kelemen, who will oversee the association as it plans its 2025 conference to take place in Philadelphia.

With my best wishes for a great conference,

Sophie Meunier (Princeton University)

TWO CAMPUSES, TWO CONTINENTS, ONE INTEGRATED CURRICULUM

The two-year Master of Arts in Transatlantic Affairs (MATA) program trains a new generation of leaders to assume important roles in transatlantic affairs. Offered jointly by the Fletcher School at Tufts University with the College of Europe, the MATA offers a unique opportunity to study on both sides of the Atlantic, providing students with the specialized skills and international perspective they need to manage cross-border issues in multicultural settings.

About EUSA

The European Union Studies Association (EUSA) is a scholarly and professional association focusing solely on the European Union, the ongoing integration process, and transatlantic relations. Founded in 1988, EUSA now has over 600 members throughout North America, all EU member states, and on all continents, representing the social sciences, the humanities, business and law practitioners, news media, and governments on both sides of the Atlantic. We welcome as members all those interested in any aspect of European integration, European Union affairs, and the transatlantic relationship. We are an independent, non-profit educational organization and our support comes from membership dues and donations, program revenue, and grants.

In the course of their work, EUSA members deal with current economic, legal, and political issues pertaining to the European Union and its relations with the rest of the world. This subject matter is of material interest to many people, businesses, law firms, cultural organizations, government agencies and others, within and beyond the academy. In 1999, EUSA established prizes for excellence in the field, including best conference paper, best dissertation, and lifetime contributions to the field. EUSA has also instituted a best book prize and the Ernst Haas Memorial Award, an award that supports promising dissertation research. EUSA members also benefit from the EUSA listserv, web site and the Biennial International Conference.

The European Union Studies Association welcomes as members those interested in any and all aspects of European integration and European Union affairs. EUSA is an independent, non-profit educational organization whose support comes from membership dues, donations, program revenues, and grants. The EUSA administrative office is generously provided by the University Center for International Studies at the University of Pittsburgh.

EUSA would like to thank all those EUSA members who have served voluntarily as committee members over the years – including the Executive Committee, program committees, grant and prize selection committees, and many others. Finally, EUSA would like to recognize and thank those who have served the Association as Chairs, from the inception of the office to the present:
